The Daily Oregonian.

THURSDAY MORNING, NOV. 30, 1876.

SHALL WE "COUNT IN"

To conscientious Republicans it is no agreeable thing to observe that there is a class of men associated with their party who are willing and even eager to justify a resort to any measures and methods whatever to retain control of the government. Partisans of this sort desire that the Republican candidates be "counted in," whether they have a majority in the disputed States or not. They do not hesitate to say with more or less directness, that this ought to be done; thus manifesting a desire to hold the government by foul means, if fair will not avail. If the Republican party could be prevailed on to adopt this scheme of politics the end would be its utter annihilation. It is not yet established that the Republicans have lawful majorities in Louisiana and Florida. If the managers rely on holding the government by manufacturing majorities in these States, they are simply preparing the way for the utter discomfiture of the party in the near future. We are of that class of Republicans who greatly desire that party shall obtain the Presidency fairly; if it be not so obtained we do not want it all.

Of course the sort of Republicans described above are watched by a class of Democrats who likewise would wrongly win. In the minds of these partisans on both sides, politics are not associated with any great social upheaval, nor with any profound movement affecting the course of thought, character and development of a people, but with a series of petty squabbles for places and pensions, in which a certain description of low cunning is the great moving force. All such can be depended on to justify and uphold, on every occasion, all that is done or proposed in the name of party, even if there is not a fig-leaf of decency to cover it.

No candid Republican can entertain a doubt that it would be infinitely better for the future of his party, to lose the Presidency, than to retain it by questionable means. To hold it under conditions which could be challenged for unfairness would be almost or quite sure to wreck the party in the next elections. It would then be beaten at a time when the consequence of defeat would be the loss of everything, coupled with the overwhelming ascendency of the Democrats in every branch of the government.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION

The political situation grows more serious. A state of affairs exists in South Carolina similar in many respects to that which exists in the State of Louisiana two years ago, but with additional complications growing out of the conflict of jurisdiction between the State and Federal courts. It is yet hardly too early to speak positively and advisedly upon the merits of the controversy. Telegraphic reports may be colored by the preferences and prejudices of those from whom information is derived. Like everything else that has come from the South concerning political matters for some time past, the South Carolina dispatches leave one in uncertainty as to details; so we do nothing that can be safely relied upon except the general facts. The "thick-and-thin" members of each party will claim that their particular friends are in the right, and that all reports received to their side are fabrications. At the bottom of all this difficulty lie gross wrongs by the managers of both parties. Violence and lawlessness on one side has been met by violence and lawlessness on the other, till it is a hopeless task to endeavor to get at the right of the matter in its origin, and the mind is compelled to assume some point in the actual proceedings which have resulted from the original wrongs, as a basis or starting point in reasoning on the subject. The aspect in which the case is presented thus far, especially with regard to the organization of the legislature, is not flattering to the Republicans. We heard yesterday remarks by a considerable number of Republicans more or less prominent in the city, who, without exception, expressed the opinion that with the light now thrown upon the subject, there appeared no justification for the occupation of the State house at Columbia by Federal troops. It will be well, however, for the country to await further particulars before forming an unqualified opinion.

No one who reads the New Orleans dispatches this morning will wonder at the agitation of Gov. Packard and those other Northern Democrats who heard the story of Mrs. Pinkston. In all the annals of crime and cruelty there is nothing more horrible, if anything falling in brutality and fiendishness the conduct of the man, whose doings she has narrated, Colonel Palmer says well, when he declares it is a broader question than that of fact making; that it is a question of humanity. That is, and has been for a long time in the minds of a large proportion of the Republican party, the real and the only issue in the contest between the parties.

Senator says that Senator Kelly has failed in his efforts to induce the Governor to issue a certificate of election to one of the Democratic candidates for elector, and we are reliably informed that attorneys have been employed to go to the proper court the proceedings necessary to determine whether Watts is elected, and if not whether there is a vacancy which the Democrat having the highest vote is entitled to assert in the Electoral College.

The official count for electors in Florida, gives the lowest Republican 33 majority over the highest Democrat. This leaves out Dade County and two or three precincts of Baker.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH THE TRIBUNE?

PORTLAND, Nov. 29, 1876.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

As you are usually pretty well informed upon current questions of public import, will you please inform me through your columns why the New York Tribune is now so far backed by any great railroad corporation, or by any individual styled "Railroad King," to be under such control? The contrast of the paper's course at this time with its former course for truth and right, induces me to make this inquiry. I know that inside of a year it has been bruited about in the Eastern press that such was the fact; that the New York Tribune had passed into the hands of one railroad king (whose name I now forget) while another of the railroad kings had become owner of another of the leading New York papers. INQUIRER.

The writer of the above appears to possess about all the information we possess on the subject concerning which he inquires.

BRIEF NOTES.

Thanksgiving.

Non judicial day.

No paper to-morrow.

The day we celebrate.

Let us all feel thankful.

Red Men's ball to-night.

Charity Fair this evening.

The sausage mill is heard in the land.

Union services in the churches to-day.

Jackson Frost was stalking around last evening.

We hear of a good many bets being with-drawn.

Fire alarm Tuesday evening. Only a burning flue.

Portland is going to have an operatic season. Hooray!

The small-pox has about exhausted itself in this city.

War declared "again" Turkey. It will only last one day.

Festival at the Congregational church to-morrow evening.

State Circuit Court will probably adjourn for the term Saturday.

Those who know say that the "hog crop" is "way up" this season.

Many a poor turkey, goose and chicken will grace the festive board to-day.

Glorious nights if the weather clerk would only shove the clouds along.

Editors, manager and printers will stay at home to-day and carve the fatted turkey.

The official vote of the State will be made next Monday—so Secretary Chadwick says.

Should any very important news be received to-day the OREGONIAN will issue a supplement.

Monday will decide who is to be the next Chief Engineer of the Portland Fire Department.

The liquor dealers of the city held a meeting Tuesday evening. Object of meeting not known.

A. B. Richardson yesterday morning sold at auction a large assortment of regalia, being the bankrupt stock of H. C. Morrice.

Our friend A. Bushwiller won the 23-pound turkey last night at the Fair. "Bush" proposes to treat his friends to-day to roast turkey.

We have at length arrived at Thanksgiving time, when a man must know how to carve a fowl or get ready to take a baked turkey in his lap.

Patrick Hartney, formerly employed upon the river, died of consumption Tuesday evening at St. Vincent's Hospital, and was buried this morning.

Next Wednesday the electors in all the States are required to deposit their "snow-flake," and settle the question who is really to be the coming man.

Chris. Nolan, the hack driver, who received some serious injuries during the runaway on Central wharf the other morning, is still unable to resume his duties, having been worse used than was at first supposed.

The report was current yesterday morning that the somewhat notorious Jim Turner had died at St. Vincent's Hospital yesterday afternoon. Upon inquiry in the proper quarters, it is learned that there was no truth in the report.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

With but little over a month's experience and no end to interruption, the firm of Pfunder, Kerron & Macbeth have acquired a large share of patronage. The institution is on a firm basis and they propose to continue and keep up the trade. The walks are now all clear from First, Morrison and Yamhill streets, and once more the house announce themselves in a most attractive advertisement. Do not let the opportunity pass but call at the earliest moment and inspect the stock.

NEW BOOKS.

The following new books have just been added to the Portland Library:

Wenderholme; a story of Lancashire and Yorkshire; by Philip Gilbert Hammerton, author of "The Intellectual Life."

DISSOLUTION OF COPARTNERSHIP.

The copartnership existing between Joe Oppenheimer and Henry Ackerman, better known as Ackerman's Dollar Store, will be dissolved January 1, 1877. It is imperatively necessary that our stock be disposed of before that time. It being a very large and complete one, comprising in the main elegant Holiday Presents, Crockery, Glass and Fine Plated Ware, it will be readily seen that great sacrifices must be made to dispose of it all within the time set.

The attention of the public, and especially of dealers throughout the State, is called to the above.

ACKERMAN'S DOLLAR STORE.

DR. HALFENNER, CHIROPODIST, of Portland, will be in Albany, Nov. 24th; Salem, 25th, 26th and 27th. We would advise persons suffering with any complaints of the feet to consult with the doctor.

N. B. "The Whitman Process" gives immediate relief, and cures in a very short time without the use of the knife, caustic or ligature. Persons living at a distance and suffering, can receive the remedy by express, C. O. D. Not Mailed. All letters containing stamp for return postage will be promptly answered. Rooms on Third street between Washington and Alder. P.O. Box 311 Portland, Oregon.

DR. C. F. WHITMAN.

W. L. ADAMS, M. D., A. M., Ll. D., corner of First and Salmon streets, is curing, by the most inveterate chronic diseases of all kinds at a low price, by medicated, electro-magnetic and chemical baths, and by medicines, the method and system of treatment being entirely simple but not less reliable. Ladies can consult the Doctor with the utmost confidence, and will receive every attention. His treatment is, in the main, entirely original, and works almost miracles, as his numerous patients will attest. Is extremely successful in treating female complaints.

Sore eyes speedily relieved. The worst form of piles cured, and the most malignant cancers eradicated root and branch without the use of the knife, or the money refunded.

There is no person living but what suffers more or less with Kidney Diseases. Coughs, Colds, Consumption (which would be unheard of if people knew the right remedies to use) and Nervousness. Kidney-Wort has already been introduced in this country from Germany, and it wonderful cures astonishes every one that tries it. Druggists, throughout the country, report that Kidney-Wort is the most popular remedy they keep, and that it gives perfect satisfaction in every case. A single bottle is not sold, but a cure is effected. Druggists will not keep it long if they do not use it themselves. Wholesale Druggists say Kidney-Wort is the best selling proprietary medicine they handle.

Geese and ducks abundant in the market at present.

Thanksgiving is likely to be generally observed in this city.

The parsonage for the Evangelical pastor is approaching completion.

Several persons have suffered from paralytic strokes recently in this city.

Mr. Mayer, now in prison in this place for forgery, is only 23 years of age.

The attendance at the college in this place is reaching up toward 150 students.

The college campus, which is nicely fenced, is now being arranged for ornamental trees.

Mr. Neil, who is to be executed at this place on the 22d of December, does not manifest much interest on the subject.

The trustees of the M. E. church are arranging to lift the debt on their house of worship, and reconstruct and repaint the building.

We are told that all of the clergy of this city without any exception, take a part in the union prayer meetings from week to week.

We understand that the friends are making an extra effort to entertain the public at the concert on Monday evening next at the M. E. church.

The public schools will have an exhibition at the Opera House on Friday evening, December 8th. Prof. Gilbert and his assistants will make it a grand affair.

The fire engine that acquired so much notoriety on the 4th of July last at Portland, in winning the medal, has gone into its new quarters this week—a building just completed for that purpose.

The display of the fire department a few nights since, at the burning of certain buildings on Main street, proved to me that Albany is fully up with any city on this coast as to protection against fire.

THE TERRITORIES.

The distillery at Boise will be started up very soon.

Olympia ships more fruit than any other port on Puget Sound.

Several fine residences have been built in Boise city the past season.

A large amount of hay has been damaged in Yakima, and it is quite impossible to get good hay in the valley.

The Episcopal church at Seattle has been offered to the Hebrews at stated hours each Sunday for Scriptural readings.

A number of cases of what is called typhoid fever are reported in Olympia, several of which are severe and dangerous.

A Walla Walla policeman was struck on the head with a rock by a drunken soldier and dangerously injured on the 18th.

Thos. McDonald of Mason county, W. T., was bitten by a ferocious hog several weeks ago and is not yet able to get around.

Mrs. Jane Shelton of Olympia was the first white child born on American soil north of the Columbia river. She is now in her 30th year.

A land slide occurred a few miles below Tenino on the Skookum Chuck last Saturday night, detaining the north-bound train two hours.

The first settler on the claim on which Olympia now stands was L. L. Smith, who squatted down there on the 20th day of October, 1846.

The new barkentine Quickstep, just built at Port Ludlow, officially measures 149 feet in length, 34 feet in breadth, 13½ feet in depth, and 423 tons.

The Snohomish river, we learn, is being full again and overflowing its banks; but so far very little damage is reported from the second sudden rise.

A great wind prevailed down the Straits of Fuca last Saturday night, driving many vessels back that were attempting to put out to sea. The wind was from the southwest.

The city of Vancouver cast 337 votes at the recent election, or 24 more than two years ago. The county of which it is the seat, Clarke, cast 667 votes two years ago and 769 this year, an increase of 78.

The Nyeleus complains that there is a "moral dearth of religious feelings among the good people of Harrisburg." If this be true of the good people, the other kind must be in a bad fix indeed.

At El Dorado, Baker county, the mining season that has just closed has been one of unusual prosperity. A large amount of money has been taken out and prospects for next year's mining were never more flattering.

INDIAN SUMMER

Like some old Turk who in the lazy noon
Sits reasoning o'the sun,
And with his subtle words draws a drowsy tune
Scarce ended at begun
What lazy warblers the wild days are!
What lazy rest
Where Life's full stream forgets to flow
And all is nearly asleep
And time's a mellow dreamy way
On which to row and to lay

So doth the Indian Summer in a haze
Of amber mist still dream
Send forth the light blue thanes of the Lord
On valleys hills and streams
Soft languors of the Orient seem to wreathe
Delicious visions with the air we breathe
And from each tree the birds in lingers
Sound the clear bells of Nature's admonet.

The golden splendors of the Eastern world
With rarer charms are blent
The woods a million banners have unfurled
In colors opulent
And slowly through the silence steals a shade
To where my cheek on Earth's brown breast is laid
My heart in sweet abandon owns what may
Best in the brief perfection of to day

THE ONLY PUMPKIN

A GOOD STORY FOR THANKSGIVING

It was on Thanksgiving night after the friends and relatives who had spent a merry evening at the house had taken themselves away, with loud laughter and invitations to "come over soon," shouted out of the darkness, as the wagon rolled away, after the children had been sent to bed in high glee at the unwonted infraction on early hours, and while his wife was still putting away the silver and the table linen that farmer Fielding went out alone, with a lantern swinging in his hand to take a last look at the stable and cow house, and make sure that the great barn door was properly fastened.

He should have returned in ten minutes but twenty had past, when Mrs Fielding looking at the clock, asked herself in some surprise, what Hiram could have found to do? And when ten more followed them, she grew a little alarmed and, tossing a shawl over her head, went down the path that led from the kitchen to the barn calling:

"Hiram! Hiram!"

There was no answer.

"Hiram" she called again, her voice taking on that shrill and unmusical tone which fright brings with it "Hiram! speak! where are you?"

She stood by the barn door now, and it was wide open swinging in the wind on its great hinges, and within all was silent and dark. There was not a sound not a glimmer of light from the lantern. Surely her husband would not have left the barn door open like that. Surely if he were there, she should see him or hear him at least, even if the lantern had gone out.

"Oh, Hiram" she cried "don't scare me; don't try to scare me, dear, for indeed I'm turning faint—I'm so"—

There she paused, struck dumb with terror. She had taken a step forward, and her foot had struck something soft and heavy that lay on the barn floor—something that did not move, but that felt as though it ought to have done so. The faintness had gone, in its place was that horror which we all know, and which is different from any personal terror, and far worse. She guessed what it was her

She did not utter his name now. She fell down and stretched out her hands, and felt for the first thing that she touched was cold, limp hand, that fell heavily over hers as she lifted it; then felt upward from it, and touched a face, cold also. She gathered it up to her breast. Dr Manual it was, she knew well enough it was the head that had rested there so often; her hand went through his curls and found his ear and stroked her.

"Hiram!" she sobbed; "dead! dead!" At last and then her voice came back in a wail that rang out upon the night air, and brought from the kitchen Madge, "the help," and her beau, Ben, who had been sitting over a parting there.

Ben, like a stalwart fellow, lifted the stern in his arms and carried him into the kitchen. How Sara Fielding got there Heaven knew, but as she knelt by the long table and wondered whether, with all those yelling babies up stairs, it would be right for her to pray to die, too, hope came back to her in a word from Ben.

"He's not dead," he said; "he's only stunned like. No doubt he's hurt mighty bad, but lor, he's not dead. I wouldn't say so if I warn't sure. I'll fetch him into bed, and go for the doctor. He'll come to, he'll come to, tell you he'll come to."

Then it seemed to the poor woman as if heaven had opened its gates and given her a glimpse of glory.

Ben bent over him as he lay on his back in the clatter of the horses' feet over the stony road, dulled by the echoes of the wooden bridge, for a while, then sharper, though fainter, on the highway leading townward.

"He's coming round, it be before the doctor gets there, and not know. If we were at home, if—if—some one else had come who could tell? Meanwhile she chafed the cold hands, could see as to a pulse. And at last she saw that he lived. More color came to his cheek. His eyes opened, but he answered her with incoherent groans.

Of the child no one had been awakened by the noise, and crept down stairs—a little ghost, with a scared face—and asked what happened, had awakened in the midst of this, the door opened, and—Merciful heaven!—the doctor! worse than that, Ben, with horror in his face and a hand pointing over his shoulder toward the red glare that flashed through the sky.

Sara saw and comprehended, and was up and out after him. The barn was on fire; and while the poor wife with shattered nerves in the room had one thought "Will he love me better than the world, live or die?" despite the cold that came too late, though it was, every offered, barn and stable, hay and corn, were licked up by the devouring flame. And all the efforts of the neighbors only availed to save the little homestead and one poor cow, which Madge's faithful hands led out at the risk of her own life.

A poor Thanksgiving for Mrs Fielding and many a kindly matron as she rose the next morning. Yet Sara thought that the very hour thanking God was the doctor went away he had felt the good wrinkled hand that had held the first spoonful of medicine when she was a baby, and that had held up her head for her to look at it in her new bonnet, and had patted her on the head and said:

"Keep up your heart, Sara—keep up your heart. We'll get him through yet. You'll be a widow this time."

She could live, and what did she care for barn or stores? Let all go, so that she had him.

There was a weary time before her days of fever and delirium days of watching, when the strong man had become a fearful child. Sara's round cheeks grew thin, and her hands began to show the blue veins. Often she wondered whether she could keep on her feet much longer than she did; and after three months'illness he got about again gaunt and pale, and lame too—though that would pass, in a month or so, the doctor said—was enough himself to make it clear that he should be told what had happened; that his barn was burned, his cattle gone, all his provisions nearly gone, and his horses and oxen, too—just the cow that gave them milk,

A Line in the Sky

Hiram had put together, that was all

"I suppose my lantern broke in the hay Sara," he said, when he could speak. "I found the door open, and went in and course was a man there. I grappled him and he struck me—that's all I know. Either the lantern did it or the man was there to set fire to the barn. However it was it's all over now. It will take Sara and us a good part of my pocket book."

She time it was the pocket book in his hand.

Darling she said how I gave your pocket book back to me. I found I've drawn my little savings to five on. I thought you might need it where

I always was in my vest pocket. You know that I kept my own books in it. I kept all I had by me. There were five hundred dollars in notes, too and receipts I dare not lose. Further there are stamps for rascals secret to change I had of retrieving my losses so am sorry. I suppose I was robbed of [illegible] senseless, and I thought my own person better and sure than my bank book at the time I was miserable enough shaking about that my head ached master.

But you [illegible] straight and I sure I and we at the house and the [illegible] But Hiram was weak to feel my hope or courage. He took it back again, and by there still when it was time for a farmer to be [illegible]

However he did not be in there was nothing conv desolate [illegible] Sara had not all time to do all she [illegible] What could she had done. But [illegible] its master. If they used enough for food that went despite neighborly kindness and Ben's vow to work forever without wages if need be that was all they could do. And it was a poor year. No fruit to speak of vegetables small and mean, and corn a disappointment.

Moreover one of Fielding's creditors did prove himself a rascal and though the farmer swore to having paid his debt there was no receipt to be found, and a mortgage of the land was the consequence. Often the discouraged man declared that he wished the thief had also murdered him, and he meant it.

But Sara Fielding kept her courage up and now that her husband was furth on his feet, and had even flung away care and grutch, would have been perfectly happy, could she have made him so.

And thus Thanksgiving came about again, and friends shook their heads once more and said, "Poor Mrs Fielding would have a different Thanksgiving from what she had been used to." And many invitations were sent to those who had entertained so freely while they could but Hiram would have none of them, and to tell the truth little room were out and little dresses were not fresh and had a look.

"We'll keep Thanksgiving at home said Sara Fielding."

"Thanksgiving" said Hiram, sadly "Well, my girl, it won't be much of a one and I can't say I feel thankful much either."

"And then there ain't any pumpkin said little Lizzie, "and no turkey."

"There was pumpkin" said the mother triumphantly—"a good one—I kept watch over it—it's all right."

Hiram groaned, thinking of the wagons full that rolled to market the year before.

"And," said the comfortable woman, "I think roast pork with apple sauce as good as turkey. We have got two barrels of apples. I shall keep Thanksgiving I would'nt miss it for any consideration; and Hiram, you go to church and take Jack, and I'll get dinner for you—I and Lizzie and Sue."

"Church" said Hiram

"Yes, church," said Sara

And she had her way.

Madge, the faithful, had gone with many tears to service elsewhere, long before, and Sara had no help, and now, having tidied the house, she went out doors to look for eggs.

Some of the chickens had been lost in the fire, some had since died mysteriously, but there were a few left. But her search was not as successful as usual. Speckled gray had taken to hiding her eggs, and, according to calculation, there must be three or four somewhere.

At last Sara heard a cackle and looking carefully, espied speckled gray's head protruding from the barn.

Certain beams and boards had so fallen as to make a hiding place for Speckle, and thither she was wending her way. Sara Fielding followed her. An arm's length in she could see, by crouching low, the great white pearls that were to make her one pumpkin richer. She put in her hand and drew them forth—four—five—and then—what was that lying there—that stained, blackened thing, with glimpses of red leather all the edges. Was it a book? Was it"—yes, it was a great soft, flat pocketbook—the pocketbook wherein Hiram Fielding had carried his wealth about his person in his great confidence in his own strength and safety.

Sara drew it out, and, trembling, looked at it. It was warped and melted into a wad, but somehow only on the outside. As she tore it open she saw that what was within was discolored and stained, but not burnt. Their little fortune was saved, there was hope and courage for Hiram now.

It is strange how much determination will do. Sara Fielding would have fainted on the ground but for the spirit with which she fought away the weakness that crept over her, but she did get into her kitchen without doing it, and then she flung herself upon her knees and wept and prayed together and grew strong again.

"I smell the fire," said little Jack, hurrying in after church. "Ain't it good, though? Pa, dinner is ready."

"And I'm ready for it," said the farmer. "How bright you all look, girls. What is it, the one pumpkin?"

He spoke a little bitterly as he uttered the last word, and drew his chair to the table.

There stood the pork, the potatoes, the great golden pie dish of apple sauce, and another—covered.

"What's that?" asked little Jack.

"Oh, Jack!" cried Susan.

"Hush," said Lizzie.

"Will you give thanks, Hiram" said his wife.

I suppose I ought, said Hiram. "We've got a house over us this year. Next, perhaps—no matter."

He bent his head and utter'd a few words of thanksgiving, thinking of all that a disappointed man does think even then.

Then he leaned back in his chair.

"Take the cover off the little dish pa," cried Lizzie.

"Why, what is in the little dish?" asked Hiram. "Why do you all look so?"

And Sara reached across and lifted the lid and Hiram knew.

Everything was safe—the coupon bonds the money the receipts—that of the wicked creditor included. In contrast with his state yesterday, Hiram felt himself a rich man, and he had the opportunity of starting fair and even with the world again, at last.

Sara was not the only one down whose cheeks tears ran that day to [illegible] and thankfulness.

And it all came about says Hiram to day because my stack kept up her head so well, was thankful to Heaven for all its mercies, and put in the best she could of our one pumpkin.—Mary Kyle Dallas

PROGRESS OF THE COUNT.

A break of the wires always occurs at the moment when dispatches are most desirable. The storms east of Salt Lake have prostrated the lines for a distance of eighty miles, cutting off communication just when the completion of the electoral count was expected. The telegraph company have done their utmost to get the news across in the shortest possible time, carrying it over the gap by pony express, and at the same time pushing the work of repairing. The latest news leaves only Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin to be counted, and it is believed to be impossible to prevent the completion of the count within the week.

PRESIDENT HAYES

In a few days more Gov. Hayes will be President of the United States His nomination by the national convention at Cincinnati was not the result of any scheming of his for the position. During the campaign, which was as hotly contested, perhaps, as any through which the country has ever passed, he bore himself not as a politician seeking by fair means or foul to obtain the great office, but as an American citizen, ready to serve the country if the people should freely express their desire to have him do so, but not willing to force himself upon them. And since the election, during all the period of intense solicitude among the whole people as to the final count of the electoral votes, he has pursued the even tenor of his way, making no effort to secure the prize to which he had become entitled by the action of the electors, and manifesting no anxiety for the position which has been, from the foundation of the Republic, the goal of the highest political ambition of American statesmen. It would be unnatural for him to feel no personal interest in a struggle in whose object and end he is, on one side, the central figure. The innate nobility of his character is illustrated in his abstaining from all interference in a contest to which he sustained such relation and in which was involved for him so much besides the success of the political principles he had maintained so long and through so great perils. This contest has been one that tried the souls of the two candidates, and Hayes has shown himself capable of governing his own feelings all through it. Now, as he is about to enter upon the administration of the government of the nation, the intelligent citizen looks back over the campaign and the period of conflict, foams and difficulties, which succeeded it, to see what index can be found therein pointing to the probable policy to be pursued by him. His self-poise in this trying hour is certainly full of promise. On the most pressing question of the day, the reform of the civil service, he has the courage to face the army of pensioners and machine politicians, and proclaim the necessity of a radical change, and declared his purpose, if elected, to meet that necessity with adequate measures of reform. The country has faith that he will do it. The people expect that so far as lies in his power, he will put an end to the corrupt and corrupting system of making the government offices a bribe for disreputable party services and a hospital for broken down politicians. This reform thoroughly carried out would be a work on which a President might well rest his fame. President Grant set out on his second term with an evident purpose to carry it out, and for some time he withstood the pressure of the politicians, receiving therefo the plaudits of the whole country. The contest between him and the Pennsylvania ring will be recalled to mind at once, and it will be remembered how he smote them down at first. But it will be remembered, too, with what disappointment the people beheld him shortly afterwards prostrated by the force of evil association, and made an instrument in the hands of a band of the most unscrupulous as well as the most vulgar political stock-jobbers that ever fastened themselves on a President of the United States. But Grant was weak in his lack of the knowledge and experience requisite to self-reliance, and he was weak in a life-time of associations not of a kind to help him in an endeavor to lift the government out of the mire of corruption in which it had sunk under the Jacksonian spoils system. To the first of these elements of weakness he himself attributes the misfortunes of his administration; the second he can not, in the nature of things, be expected to perceive. Gov. Hayes will enter office equipped with ample knowledge of the principles of civil government, and with no lack of experience in political affairs, and he will not be encumbered with unfortunate associations and habits. He can be strong, and we have the utmost confidence that he will be.

That an ugly complication which has arisen in the Vermont case before the joint convention of the Senate and House. The certificate, or return, of Aldrich, the person contesting the place of Soliece as an elector, not being presented to the President of the Senate when Vermont was called, a demand was made for it. President Ferry said he had received no such certificate, or return. It was then stated that it had been forwarded to him by mail, but he said he had never received it. A paper asserted to be a duplicate of the document was then tendered to him by Mr. Hewitt, but he declined to receive it, on the ground that it came too late. There is nothing in the world in the Democratic claim to a vote from Vermont, but it is unfortunate that the facts in connection with the delivery of the certificate should have taken such shape, as it is likely to lead to misconstruction of the motives of Mr. Ferry. It is hardly likely a package was ever sent him by mail, as that is not the manner provided by law for the returns to reach the President of the Senate, except in cases where the messenger appointed by the electors fails to deliver them. The law requires a messenger to be chosen by the electors and sent with the returns, and another copy to be forwarded by mail. The copy by mail is simply to guard against failure of the messenger to deliver. If the Vermont Democratic would-be elector had been so careful as to forward the copy by mail, which is only the secondary and alternative mode of transmission, would he have omitted the transmission of a copy, by messenger, which is the primary method? Hardly, we should think But it is not claimed he sent a copy by a messenger. The strong probabilities are no duplicate was mailed. As to the document offered by Hewitt, it is subject to another objection equally fatal with that of its coming long after the expiration of the time allowed by law. It comes by the hand, not of a messenger appointed to bear it, nor by the mail, but by the hand of a member of Congress, having no other relations to the case than that of being the chairman of the National Democratic Committee The President of the Senate would be going a long way outside the limits of his duty or his right, were he to receive whatever paper may be offered him by persons unknown to the law, and present them as matters to be considered in counting the votes for President Mr. Hewitt, a member of Congress and the chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is no more to be recognized in such a case than Mr John Doe or Richard Roe, who might take it into his head to obstruct the proceedings of the commission by getting up a paper and calling it a return of electoral votes

A party by the name of Emil Baxter, who very appropriately hails from Nauvoo, Illinois, has written a long letter to the Grand Master of Free Masons of that State, complaining that, in some way which is not specified, the lodge to which the writer has belonged wronged him and was sustained in doing so by the Grand Master. The nature of the grievance does not appear, but the writer concludes that he is warranted in writing a long and dreary epistle arraigning the entire order for an evil and dangerous society. A copy of this document is furnished by the writer to a paper called the Christian Cynosure, which is simply the organ of that comparatively small class of fanatics and bigots who are just Christian enough to cant of piety, but not to comprehend the liberality of Christianity, and that paper of course sends it broadcast to the world. We have been requested to republish it as a matter of news, but the only news there is about it is that such a letter was written and published in the East. That news we have now given.

The war of races continues in South Carolina. The attempt to arrest four negroes for a robbery has resulted in a collision in which large numbers of people are arrayed on each side, and on the color line. This is the telegraphic report. It may be, we hope it is, exaggerated. If true, the possibility is suggested that there is a good deal more at the bottom of it than an attempt to arrest men for robbery. It seems scarcely probable that the arrest of four negroes for a high crime would provoke the negroes to gather in force and offer resistance, after the fearful experience they have had in conflicts with the white people of late.

It is stated that President Grant has determined to recognize the Nicholls government of Louisiana. Of course the Packard government will fall to pieces at once, if Nicholls be recognized. Whatever may be the truth with respect to the popular election in Louisiana, it is certain that the better class of the people, the class upon which the governor must rely for the preservation of peace and good order, are on the side of Nicholls. Packard may have been fairly elected governor, though that is by no means apparent, but no one pretends that he is such a person as ought to be chosen to govern any State.

Mr. W. Carey Johnson is still amusing himself, through his paper, by perpetrating small puns on the name of the editor of the Oregonian. We have not the slightest objection to that mode of discussion on his side. It is all right if he enjoys it. We assure him we shall never attempt to interfere with the exclusive use, by any editor, of that sort of journalism. But Carey has not yet offered to clear up that "Joe Thomas" matter. We are afraid calling names won't amount to much while that matter is left unexplained. It is a little funny that he should call this punning business "war."

The Democratic journals finding it more difficult than they, apparently, expected to make the people join in a general clamor for the overthrow of the constitution, have become ill-natured and are now ranting incoherently about the "villainy" of the Electoral Commission. Display of ill-temper is the certain sign of the consciousness of having a bad cause, either in journals or individuals.

Reports come to us from all parts of the State of the flattering prospects in farming. The amount of ground in grain greatly exceeds that of any previous year, and fall sown grain is growing nicely, while spring sowing has already begun and is progressing finely. The favorable winter weather has afforded opportunities for an unusual amount of work, and these have not been left unimproved.

The London Echo predicts that the decision of the electoral commission in Washington will be accepted as final by both parties. It says that the Americans carry their love of the law to a point of obedience which Englishmen do not understand: "There is a strength in the moderation of the American character which we only read of when it is at its highest tension under military pressure or great political excitement, as in a Presidential crisis. The people who in victory could so easily forget all they had suffered in the civil war are a people to be credited with strength in their moderation; it is only a strong people that does not attaint, impeach, nor imprison for political offenses."

The Messrs. Roberts Bros., the well known Boston publishers, have adopted a method of getting even with the critics which the newspapers will thoroughly approve. They fasten on some unfavorable mention in a leading newspaper, address to the editor an elaborate reply, in which they floor him completely by holding up a multitude of favorable notices, and thus have it out with him in his own advertising columns. It is a noble fashion, and Roberts Bros. are wise in their generation. May their shadows never grow less.

The New York Tribune remarks: Statisticians estimate that every immigrant arriving in this country is worth $800 in gold to the government. In spite of the small premium on gold just now, the foreign noblemen in disguise, who may be met with at Castle Garden, would not object to a moiety of Uncle Sam's proposed profits from their labors.

It seems a little premature to begin a new Presidential contest before the last one is settled. Nevertheless, the Davenport, Iowa, Democrat pledges its support to Judge David Davis in 1880. It does not assure him of the electoral vote of Iowa, however, which would have been more to the purpose

A barrister, not over young or handsome, examining a young lady witness in court determined to perplex her, and said, "Miss upon my word, you are very pretty!" The young lady very promptly replied, "I would return the compliment, if I were not on oath."

FACTS OF HISTORY.

PORTLAND, March 1, 1877

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN

Your correspondent, "Multum in Parvo," in an article on "The Wallowa Country, published on Wednesday says

And it is to these men that we owe the possession of Oregon, for they prevented Oregon from being traded to England for an insignificant cod fishery, by sending Dr Whitman to Washington in the dead of winter, where he arrived just in time to save the country to us.

I was personally acquainted with Dr Whitman, and it is somewhat singular that he should never have mentioned, in our conversations, anything in connection with his last visit to the Eastern States of this import Gov. Abernethy, who knew him more intimately, never heard him make the slightest allusion to the matter. On Saturday last I received a letter from Mr Courtney M Walker, now living in Tillamook county, who came to Oregon in 1834 and is, as he ought to be quite familiar with the incidents pertaining to the early history of the country. It so happens that he writes upon this very subject, and I make this extract from his letter "The pioneer papers modestly allude to the circumstance of Dr. Whitman having gone to Washington especially to prevent the government surrendering to the British crown, Oregon Territory. The Astoria papers, and Spaulding's pamphlet, insist that Dr. Whitman was the sole cause, etc., etc." What supreme nonsense. Let us see: In the winter of 1836, the government sent here W. A. Slocum, a U. S. naval officer, to look after the interests of the citizens here, and who in the spring of 1837 took to California a number of the settlers, in the vessel he had chartered, for the purpose of purchasing cattle, and if you will examine the correspondence between himself and the secretaries of war and the navy von will there find what is said. Also the report of Capt. W. L. Wyeth to the same bureaux. In 1841 the Pacific squadron under Lieut Wilkes was here, and, sent throughout the country companies, headed by officers to explore and report their findings. One of these companies, under Lieut. Emmons, went through by land to California Now read Wilkes' report and you will decide that there was neither thought nor danger of the country being given up to England. Besides these, read Christy's report of 1832, and Smith's of 1829."

Dr Whitman was an earnest worker and a sincere friend of Oregon, and undoubtedly did all that he could to advance the interests of the country in his visits to the Atlantic States, but I seriously think that he "prevented Oregon from being traded to England for an insignificant," or any other kind of "cod fishery."

Your correspondent, "Multum in Parvo," is again in error when he intimates that Whitman and Spaulding brought their families across the plains to Oregon in wagons in 1836. At that date there were no Americans in the country. I think he will find that they came here in 1836, and then only part way with wagons Mrs Whitman and Mrs. Spaulding were the first white women who crossed the Rocky mountains. Their children were the first American children born in Oregon.

While upon historical matters, if you will permit me, I would like to make an extract from a correspondent in the last Willamette (please spell this word with an i) Farmer, to show you how nicely we are manufacturing history now a-days

After bidding the friends good bye, on my way home I passed near where the battle of the Abiqua was fought, where Captain Geer and Brown, of the Oregon militia, defeated the Klamaths under Yachtka and Red Blanket. In the beginning of the fight Yachtka was killed, when the Indians retreated to the mountains. The Indians would have suffered severely, but for the incessant rain which rendered most of the guns unserviceable.

The night following it snowed; early next morning sergeant King, of Capt. Geer's company, struck the track of the Indians going into the mountains (they had made arrows all night), and on coming up with them it was found they had chosen a strong position, but they were routed with the loss of 14 killed and wounded; some of the Indian women helping in the fight, two of whom were killed. The charge of Sergeant King was so swift that only one white man was wounded. The Indians fought well, but Red Blanket was killed. Red Blanket, after being shot, leaped a bluff 30 feet in height and swam nearly across the Abiqua. This fight saved the white settlers a bloody war, as the Indians were in council with other tribes, and by robbing houses and other acts of hostility showed their hostile purposes. This happened in February or March, 1848.

The Abiqua is the name of a creek in Marion county. I never heard of this battle before reading it in the Farmer About the time it was said to have been fought, I was just preparing to publish the Oregon Free Press, and had been editing, for a year and a half previously, the Oregon Spectator. I mention this, as I would have liked very much to have had the news, and as it reflects somewhat upon the newspaper enterprise of that day. However, as I am some older than I was then, twenty-nine years ago, and may have become forgetful, it occurred to me that I would inquire of Gov Abernethy, who was at the time Governor of Oregon under the Provisional Government. I did so, but like myself, he had no recollection of it More Indians appear to have been killed and wounded in this Abiqua affair than in any single engagement of the Cayuse war. Gov Abernethy was an efficient executive, prosecuted that war without money, almost without munitions, and would be very apt to know about any Indian fighting going on at the time. Rufus Choate lectured on the "Romance of the Seas," the "Romance of History" would be a capital subject just now.

SYNODICAL PRESBYTERY.

The Presbytery of Oregon met yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, and after the usual devotional exercises, was called to order by the moderator. The roll of members was called, and it being found that there was no quorum yet present, the meeting adjourned until 1 o'clock P. M., at which time absent members were fully expected to be present.

In the meantime, brethren of the other presbyteries being present in sufficient numbers to form a quorum of the synodical executive committee, it was resolved to proceed forthwith to an examination of the Nez Perce students, with a view to licensing them if found qualified to the full "Ministry of the Word." They were then taken in hand and submitted to a searching examination lasting until 12 o'clock, when the committee arose to report to the presbytery in the afternoon.

At 1 o'clock P. M. the presbytery met, was opened with prayer and called to order. A quorum being present, the synodical executive committee made a report of their action in regard to the Nez Perce students. The report was adopted, and the presbytery proceeded to a brief examination into their qualifications and attainments in theology, after which they were licensed to preach the Gospel, among their own people for one year, according to the solemn forms of the Presbyterian church.

After some other routine business and a report from Rev. J. R. Thompson of his missionary tour through Eastern Oregon and Washington and Western Idaho, conveying much valuable information, the presbytery adjourned to meet at the call of the moderator, time and place to be designated in the call.

RIVER AND HARBOR IMPROVEMENT.

As soon as the current freshet shall subside in the Columbia river, range beacons will be put up at the crossings at St. Helens bar. These lanterns will be similar to those used on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. They are of a peculiar shape, quite powerful for a small lantern, and are made at St. Louis, at a cost of $6 50 each.

The new government snag-puller Corvallis is at present operating at Centennial Chute. She is found to be a most excellent boat for the purposes designed, and is rendering very effective service in the way of navigation.

Messrs. Stone and Grant, contractors for building wing-dams on the Upper Willamette, will commence work next week—probably about the 11th. Between Oregon City and Corvallis 5,000 feet of wing dams will be constructed, this season. Wing dams are to be built at the following points: Half Moon Bend, Bowers' Bar, Pine Tree Rapids, Upper Tickle's Bar, Bilger Dog Slough, Buena Vista Bar, Reid Bar, McCluskey Chute, Long Tree Bar, and Prickly Bar. Dams will also be built at a few other points which will be determined as soon as the water falls.

Yesterday, the Willamette river at this point was 13 feet above extreme low water. On the 5th of June, 1876, it was 22 feet and 6 inches above extreme low water. The maximum height attained last year by the river was 28 2-10 feet above the low water mark.

The buildings connected with the light station at Admiralty Head have just been painted and subjected to some slight repairs.

NEW BOOKS.

The following new works have been presented to the Portland Library by the Hon. Matthew P. Deady:

The Messages and Documents of the Eighth and Ninth Regular Sessions of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, held in 1874 and 1876, forming a complete set from the commencement to the present time.

EASTERN OREGON.

The East Oregonian indulges in this bit of retrospection:

But a few short years have passed since all the country lying east of the Cascade mountains, in the State of Oregon, was embraced in the county of Wasco. In reality it was an unexplored region, with the exception of a few miles on each side of the old emigrant wagon road that entered Oregon at the mouth of Boise river. The immigrant, when he crossed the Snake river at this point, was worn out with travel and watching, and was but little qualified to judge of the great natural advantages the country possessed; and these immigrants continued on their way to the Oregon country proper, settled, and were happy in the belief that this country was good for nothing but roving tribes of Indians.

When Wasco county was created, nearly all the settlers in the big "Wallamet," or "Willamette," would have sold all their interests in the new county for a mere song. At last the adventurous trader, next the miner, and then the farmer and stock-raiser, put in an appearance, and what was heretofore considered a sage brush country teemed with growing grain fields, and stock of all kinds, summer and winter upon the range. Mines of wealth have been unearthed, thriving villages have sprung up—the leading one of which is Pendleton—a hardy and virtuous population have settled all around, with plenty of space left for one thousand times as many more—and no fear of pauperism, at that. Counties have been set off from old mother Wasco, till she ranks less than some of her daughters in population. The counties of Umatilla, Union and Baker can to-day, if all their good wheat land was under cultivation, supply the world with wheat. Grant and Baker counties have furnished more of the precious metals than all the State besides. But we want an outlet for these productions, a railroad to Portland, or locks at the Cascades and Dalles. We need and we must have them in time, but we want them in the shortest time! We have shown our Webfoot friends that we have a good country, and now we want their help to develop it. Don't ask that all appropriations that Congress in its wisdom and justice gives to Oregon, for improvements, shall be expended on the coast or Willamette valley. Give us our due, an opening through the Cascades, and we will show you that the old Wasco landmarks are worth more to the toiling millions than all Oregon besides!

A Point on which the Doctor's Agree.

Physicians who have tested Hostetter's Stomach Bitters concur in representing it to be an eminently safe stimulant, far preferable to the ordinary liquors of commerce not only because it is medicated, but because it is infinitely pure. Its alcoholic basis is the finest old rye, and this is tempered and rendered medicinal by the curative ingredients of botanic origin which it holds in solution. It has often been imitated, but never rivalled, and is to day the leading tonic, diuretic and laxative of America. Malarial fevers are prevented and remedied by it, and it is a thoroughly reliable medicine in cases of dyspepsia, constipation, liver complaint, rheumatism, gout, nervousness, urinary and uterine affections. It improves the appetite, increases the bodily stamina, checks premature decay, and as a sustaining and comforting cordial for the aged and infirm is unequalled.

The Medical Institute of Dr. W. J. Adams, corner of First and Salmon streets, will be removed to Hood river in a few months. Till then chronic diseases of men and women will be treated in Portland as usual. An accomplished lady assistant to give baths to ladies and assist in their treatment always in the office.

The American People.

No people in the world suffer as much with Dyspepsia as Americans. Although years of experience in medicine had failed to accomplish a certain and sure remedy for this disease and its effects, such as Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Waterbrash, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Liver Complaints, coming up of the food, low spirits, general debility, &c., yet since the introduction of GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER we believe there is no case of Dyspepsia that cannot be immediately relieved. 30,000 dozen sold last year without one case of failure reported. Go to your Druggist and get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try it. Two doses will relieve you. Regular Size 75 cents. Agents, Crane & Brigham, Wholesale Druggists, San Francisco.

THE UNDERSIGNED DESIRES INFORMATION concerning his brother, DENNIS WHITE. He was born in the town of Kilmacanogue, county of Wicklow, Ireland, and emigrated to the United States in 1848. He lived in Oswego county, N. Y., and worked with me for a man named P. H. Berry, a tanner; afterwards we went to Onejda county and worked for P. & P. Underhill. I last saw Dennis White about three years ago as he was about starting for Ireland; since that time I have heard nothing from him. I came to Portland, Oregon, in September, 1876, where I still reside. Business of importance requires that I should know of my brother. Dennis White is still alive. Any information can be addressed to me, care of Parrish & Cornell, Portland, Oregon, "Irish World," N. Y. please copy. je6d3t WILLIAM WHITE.

CATARRH.

Within a few days a few hundred dollars for the relief obtained from the first dose.

From the well-known maker of Yale's Mammoth Tent.

Gentlemen—I have suffered ten years from the worst forms of Acute Catarrh, or Cold in the Head, that ever afflicted mortal man. Whenever I took a fresh cold it would settle in my head, causing the most violent sneezing, accompanied by excessive discharges from my eyes and nose. For days and days my suffering would be intense, and finally settled in my loins and bowels, would render my life miserable for a month. Never, during all my sufferings, was I able to obtain even temporary relief from any medicine I ever tried. Three weeks ago, while suffering from the worst attack I ever had, I procured a bottle of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH. The relief from the first dose was so gratifying that I would willingly have given one hundred dollars to obtain it. A few doses completely cured me. My head has since been perfectly free from mucous accumulations, my breathing easy, and not a symptom of trouble about my bank and Lowels has presented itself. Its effect in my case has been truly remarkable.

Very respectfully, R. M. YALE,
call and Awning Maker, 2 South Market St.
